Thanks for the update.

Are there HASMAT materials for the public to review regarding toxins in the proposed TDS Soitec solar panels, especially in the event of fire? How large of an off-site evacuation would be necessary? Would thousands of citizens need to be evacuated? Would evacuees be out of their homes and businesses for many hours if not days? Are evacuation shelters foreseen?

I have heard, although not yet verified, that fire of the proposed types of solar panels on TDS could cause evacuations all the way into the city of San Diego. Is there any merit to this? Has anyone looked into this aspect?

Good Morning Everyone,

This email is being sent to over 140 email addresses on blind carbon copy.

Late last week the County's website was migrated to a new platform including links to all Soitec documents and the Administrative Record. Information that had been posted the past couple of weeks to the former platform had to be reloaded on the web pages of the new platform, so you have may have noticed some missing information for a day or two. All information should now be viewable and I have provided the following links for your reference. Please let me know if you discover any issues or have any questions.

Thank you,

Robert Hingtgen, Planner III
